[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Washington, D.C., Feb. 9.—Senator La Follette has thrown down the gauntlet of open battle to Senator Stephenson and his fight for re-election in the Wisconsin legislature. In an official statement this afternoon the senator declared that he would welcome a statement of what Stephenson had paid towards his campaigns.

He said, in reference to the report that he was using his efforts to prevent an investigation through fear of disclosure relative to his campaign funds received from Stephenson in the past:

"Let me threat down any friends of mine from supporting a resolution to investigate the charges of violation of the law in connection with the Senatorial primary."

"I should be glad to have Senator Stephenson state fully and specifically the exact amount he contributed to each of my personal campaigns."

What Stephenson Spent.
Madison, Wis., Feb. 9.—St. Sen. La Follette has prepared a statement of his expenditures in the last primary election. This statement, which will be filed with the secretary of state later this afternoon or tomorrow, shows his expenditures by Senator Stephenson in the primary campaign of $107,750.05. Of this sum $52,000 were spent outside of Milwaukee county and the remainder in Milwaukee county.

The eighth joint ballot for United States Senator was taken at noon today and resulted in no action. There were one hundred and nineteen members present and Senator Stephenson received fifty-eight votes or two less than majority. Fifteen members were absent.

After the report and assembly to day adopted the motion of the conference committee relative to the appointment for an investigation of the recent primary election. This means that a joint committee will be named and the work of investigation begun at once.

CLEVER TEAM GAVE WONDERFUL EXHIBIT

Skating at West Side Roller Rink Shows Marvelous Feats That Can Be Done.

With a big audience present, the cleverness of the Rexas last night opened their engagement at the roller rink. Other celebrated skaters have been seen here. They have been complimented upon being artists at the very top of their profession, but it was not until last night that the true climax was reached, and this was reached by the Rexas. They have what might be termed a "swell stunt" which is wonderful. Mr. Rexas skates on his hands, his heels, and his toes; then he resorts to one heel and one toe. He turns somersaults and presents the "spread eagle" stunt in the most artistic manner. Then he gives an imitation of a freight train starting out and going through a tunnel, which is illustrated before the audience. The performance last evening was thoroughly appreciated. This wonderful team will appear again on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings with Saturday matinee and certainly should pack the house each performance.

Put Your Faith in Truth.
Have faith in truth, never in numbers. The great surge of numbers rolls up noisily and impressively, but flattens on the shore, and slides back into the mud of oblivion. But a true opinion is the ocean itself, calm in its rest, eternal in its power.—Hart.

KICKERS' COLUMN.

To the Editor:

In view of the fact that the council has determined to lay a brick pavement upon one of the streets the question arises: Shall the abutting property be made to bear the total cost? For various reasons the total cost is especially worthy of careful consideration at this time.

Although South Main street, the roadway under discussion, below St. Lawrence avenue is a residence street, it bears almost as much travel as the business streets. It is the means of travel for all the farm produce raised south of the city, and brought to Janesville to swell in exchange the trade of the various business establishments. It is the highway between the business section of the city and the manufacturing plants of Spring Brook, which since their inception during the past ten years, have also increased the volume of trade with the business houses and stamped Janesville as an industrial center as it never was before.

Who, however, reap the benefit of a more industrial Janesville, a more progressive Janesville? Are they the people who live on any certain street, are they the people who live in any ward, or are they the people, the artists, and the business and professional men of the whole city? These are the questions which the residents of South Main street are asking, and which they hold are worthy of due discussion. They take pride in the advancement of the city, and while they are willing to contribute their share toward its growth, they think it only just that others who reap the same benefit should do their part. They are willing to do what is reasonable. They ask only that the council meet them halfway. And by the city charter it is provided that that body may determine the proportion.

After setting forth that the city as a whole would be benefited by this improvement, it remains to answer the contention that the abutting property would be benefited and have its value advanced. That argument has never been proved. When a man spends money in beautifying his premises he gains in view something of permanence and not something subject to public wear and tear. When he builds a handsome porch he makes his whole place more attractive to a prospective buyer. When he constructs a fine terrace he expects the public to keep off that it may look beautiful indefinitely. Such improvements directly benefit his home and lot and raise not only the intrinsic value, but what is more important, the market value. When the street in front of his property is improved, however, and the appearance of his home improved, a liberal offer on that account. A tenant will not pay him any higher rental. In short, he is paying for something which will be of no benefit to him and which will eventually give out under the wear and tear of other people's vehicles even during his lifetime. But there is one item of expense that he should gladly stand on. That is the laying of a curbing which defines his lines and which is a thing of permanence and of beauty.

Public buildings, which are classed as objects of beauty, are never subject to such wear as a pavement and they last for several lifetimes. If the residents of Main street are ever asked to bear the whole expense of paving on the ground that it is a permanent improvement and object of beauty to the property, it would not be unreasonable of them to ask that the street be classed as a boulevard and closed to all heavy teaming. This is done in large cities when a residence street is paved at the expense of the property-owners in order that they may have the rightfulness of their expenditure in the form of a permanent improvement. And South Main street is a residence street.

The only other argument against the proposed division of expense is that Milwaukee and River streets were paved at the expense of the property-owners. This, however, is not a logical case. For six years ago, when Milwaukee street was paved, it was a main street and a man receives a small rental on it or none at all. It is his home, or on the other hand, an owner of six or six feet frontage in the business section receives the rental of three stores; anyone of which brings twice the income of a whole house on Milwaukee street. A good pavement on a business street draws more farmer travel, which means more trade for the tenant and his consequent ability to pay higher rent.

It is generally admitted that Janesville is behind other cities in the matter of paved streets. Upon investigation, however, it is found that in these other cities the property-owners bear but half the expense. What a convenient arrangement! He is for a city council! That body can go ahead and pave several streets each season with out dread of wrangling with the property-owners, without being accused of passing measures of confiscation, and without incurring the disfavor and opposition of their constituents. The time must come when Janesville, in order to keep step with other cities in having several miles of paved streets, must also adopt that progressive arrangement which those cities have in force. Is anything to be gained by postponement? Must the people wait all longer for the brick pavements needed on so many streets? The question is now before the council. Let it be hoped that it may be settled now and for all time in favor of Janesville progressive and Janesville beautiful.

Boston, Mass.—Telegrams are actually being sent for 1 cent a word. If the message can be mailed to the receiver 1/2 cent a word covers the bill. By means of the "Telepost" the rate is further reduced to 1/2 cent per word and by this late invention absolute secrecy in telegraphic communication is attained.

The New England states are today utilizing the invention of Patrick Delany, known as the "telepost," to great advantage. Business houses in Boston are using this form of communication for much of their correspondence where previously the United States mails were used and where immediate delivery is desired. The telepost has revolutionized the means of communication between the place and within a short time it is completely predicted that this system of cheap communication will be extended over the entire country.

Mr. Delany's comparatively simple invention, it is possible to transmit messages to any distance at the rate of a thousand words per minute and these are automatically received at the other end of the line. Not only has the telepost been in operation long enough to demonstrate impressively that it can accomplish all that was claimed for the system mechanically, but it has also shown that its low rate produces a large volume of business that never existed when 25 cents for 10 words was the minimum charge.

Next to the 50-word, 25-cent telepost and the 10-word, 10-cent telepost innovations is the "telepost." The rate on these is only 25 cents for 100 words between any two points. For each additional 25 words the charge is 5 cents. To large users of the service the company makes performing machines having standard typewriter keyboards. After performing his own message, the sender delivers for transmission and delivery, and the receiver makes his own transcription.

In addition to its great economy, the telepost service gives the absolute secrecy that has long been demanded, but never before attained in telegraphing. While the utmost secrecy is sought in letter correspondence, telegrams of the most confidential nature must, under old conditions, be handled by at least two telegraph operators.

Patrick Delany's life has been largely devoted to electrical inventions. He at present holds 150 patents covering anti-induction cables, synchronous six messages simultaneously over one wire, which has been adopted by the British government and was awarded a gold medal and diploma at the international inventions exhibit in London in 1883. His automatic system for ocean cables attracted much attention, as have his other remarkable inventions.

Mr. Delany was born in Ireland 64 years ago and early in his youth learned telegraphy in Hartford, Conn., where he worked, up from office boy to superintendent of lines. He then branched out in newspaper work and became editor and writer. He has received many flattering tokens of his ability and worth to the engineering profession. He is a quiet man, reserved and like Edison, capable of concentrating thought for long periods at a time. The work he has done in perfecting the telepost system alone warrants him a place among great inventors.

Feasted Two Days and Nights.
Commander Perry and his party, returning from the pole, their full dash for the pole in 1900, slaughtered a herd of seven musk oxen on Hazen island. For two days and nights thereafter they crunched inside their snow huts, eating continuously, and when they had finished, the pile of bones outside was "as high as a tall man's chin."

Origin of "Blue Laws."
The name "blue laws" was given to the first collection of laws framed for the government of the New Haven colony. They were published in collective form in 1650, the volume being in a blue cover, which gave rise to the name that has clung to the laws ever since.

Chance for a Bandmaster.

Chicago, Ill.—One of the saddest accidents of recent record was the shooting of Mrs. L. C. Tuckerman of New York, daughter of Fritz, Gen. A. C. Girard, U. S. A., retired, by George A. Dusse, brother of Chicago's mayor. Both families are prostrated with grief over the affair and Mr. Dusse is in a state of nervous collapse. The coroner's jury as well as the father and mother of Mrs. Tuckerman, with whom she was stopping, entirely exonerated Mr. Dusse from any intention of part in the fatal accident.

George A. Dusse, with his brother, the mayor, his mother and other members of the family, was discussing the recent burglaries in Chicago in a flat adjoining that occupied by Irregular General Girard and his daughter, Mrs. Tuckerman, Mr. Dusse in a joking manner said to the maid of the house that he would show her how to use his large pistol in order to protect the house in case burglars should appear. While showing his action to the maid the pistol exploded and unfortunately was pointed directly at

Mrs. Tuckerman, who was dressing before a mirror in the adjoining apartment. The bullet penetrated a heavy wooden blind and struck Mrs. Tuckerman in the heart, inflicting almost instant death.

As rushed to the adjoining apartment to see if any damage had been done and was horrified at the havoc wrought. Aid was immediately summoned, but it was too late. Mrs. Tuckerman was known to army circles as "one of the beautiful Girard sisters" and for years had been a social favorite in New York society.

FOR ADVANCEMENT OF THE FARMER

COMMISSION ON COUNTRY LIFE MAKES REPORT TO PRESIDENT.

TRIBUTE TO AGRICULTURE

Farm is Designated as the Foundation of National Efficiency—Suggestions for Improvement of Conditions Socially and Commercially—Help That May Be Afforded by the Congress.

Washington, Feb. 9.—President Roosevelt transmitted to congress the report of the country life commission. Substantially the document was as follows:

To the President: The commission on country life herewith presents its report. The commission finds the agriculture in the United States, taken together, is prosperous commercially when measured by the conditions that have obtained in previous years, though there are some regions in which this is only partially true. The country people are producing vast quantities of supplies for food, shelter, clothing, and for use in the arts. The country homes are improving in comfort, attractiveness and healthfulness. Not only in the material wealth that they produce, but in the supply of dependent and strong citizenship, the agricultural people constitute the foundation of our national efficiency. As agriculture is the immediate basis of country life, so it follows that general affairs of the open country speaking broadly, are in a condition of improvement.

Many institutions, organizations and movements are actively contributing to the increasing welfare of the open country. The most important of these are the United States department of agriculture, the colleges of agriculture and the experiment stations in the states, and the national farmers' organizations. These institutions and organizations are now properly assuming leadership in country life affairs, and consequently in many of the public questions of national being. With these agencies must be mentioned state departments of agriculture, agricultural societies, and organizations of very many kinds, teachers in schools, workers in church and other religious associations, traveling libraries, and many other groups, all working with commendable zeal to further the welfare of the people and the open country.

Most Prominent Deficiencies. Yet it is true, notwithstanding all these "progresses" as measured by the material standards, that agriculture is not commercially as profitable as it should be for the labor and energy expended, and that the farmer expends and risks more in the open country than he receives in return. The reasons for this are many and complex. They are the result of the conditions in the open country as they have developed since the close of the civil war. The farmer is almost necessarily handicapped in the development of his business, because his capital is small and the volume of his transactions limited. The people of the open country are usually situated in isolated places, and the general readjustment of modern life due to the great changes in manufacturing and distribution. All of these factors, and many others, are working to the disadvantage of the farmer. The farmer is almost necessarily handicapped in the development of his business, because his capital is small and the volume of his transactions limited. The people of the open country are usually situated in isolated places, and the general readjustment of modern life due to the great changes in manufacturing and distribution. All of these factors, and many others, are working to the disadvantage of the farmer.

The reasons for the lack of a highly responsible society. Many existing rural societies are very many organizations and institutions as the full report explains. The land might become practically co-operative for mutual benefit, as, for example, all the organizations standing for rural progress should be federated, in state and nation.

Lack of good training for country life in the schools. The commission has pointed out a number of remedies that are extremely important; but running through all these remedies are several great principles, or principles, which must be utilized in the endeavor to solve the problems of country life. All the people should recognize what these fundamental forces and agencies are.

Lack of good highway facilities. The widespread continuing depletion of soils, with the injurious effect on rural life.

A general need of new and active leadership. Other causes contributing to this are: Lack of any adequate system of agricultural credit; the farmer is entitled to know what age of labor, a condition that is complicated by the interdependence of the farmer and the community; lack of institutions and thorough-going system of surveys in detail of the exact conditions under the soil; the burdens and the narrowing of the farmer's vision; lack of adequate supervision of public health.

Nature of the Remedies. Some of the remedies lie with the national government, some of them with the states and communities in the development of these resources until we know exactly what they are.

Some of the remedies lie with the individual farmer. The country schools are to be so many of suggestions that have been collected that they shall educate the people in terms of the daily life. The commission now enumerates the "things" that seem to be most fundamental and most needed at the present time.

Every person on the land, old or young, can remove some of the handicaps of the farmer, and it cannot be overdone, must have a chance also set some kind of work in motion to receive the information necessary for a successful business, and for the encouragement of a system of thoughtful, comfortable, resourceful life.

in order to take stock and to develop a scientifically and economically sound country life.

The establishing of a nationalized system of extension work in rural communities through all the land-grant colleges with the people at their homes and on their farms.

A thorough-going investigation, by experts of the middleman system of handling farm products, coupled with a general inquiry into the farmer's disadvantages in respect to taxation, transportation rates, co-operative organizations and credit, and the general business system.

An inquiry into the control and use of the streams of the United States with the object of protecting the people in their ownership and of saving to agricultural uses such benefits as should be reserved for those purposes.

The establishing of a highway engineering service, or equivalent organization, to be at the call of the states in working out effective and economical highway systems.

The establishing of a system of parcels posts and postal savings banks.

And providing some means or agency for the guidance of public opinion toward the development of a rural society that shall rest directly on the land.

Other remedies recommended for consideration by congress are: The enlargement of the United States bureau of education, to enable it to stimulate and co-ordinate the educational work of the nation.

Careful attention to the farmers' interests in legislation on the tariff, on regulation of railroads, control or regulation of corporations and of speculation, legislation in respect to rivers, forests, and the utilization of swamp lands.

Increasing the powers of the federal government in respect to the supervision and control of the public health.

Providing such regulations as will enable the states that do not permit the sale of liquors to protect themselves from traffic from adjoining states.

In setting all these forces in motion, the co-operation of the states will be necessary; and in many cases definite state laws may greatly aid the work.

Remedies of a more general nature are: A broad campaign of publicity, that must be undertaken until all the people are informed on the whole subject of rural life, and until there is an awakened appreciation of the necessity of giving this phase of our national development as much attention as has been given to other phases of interests; a quickened sense of responsibility, in all the country people, to the community and the state in the conservation of soil fertility, and in the working with commendable zeal to further the welfare of the people and the open country.

Most Prominent Deficiencies. Yet it is true, notwithstanding all these "progresses" as measured by the material standards, that agriculture is not commercially as profitable as it should be for the labor and energy expended, and that the farmer expends and risks more in the open country than he receives in return. The encouragement of a system of thoughtful, comfortable, resourceful life.

both in home and neighborhood. This means redoubled efforts for better country schools, and a vastly increased interest in the welfare of country boys and girls on the part of those who pay the school taxes. Education by means of agriculture is to be a part of our regular public school work. Special agricultural schools are to be organized. There is to be a well-developed plan of extension teaching, by means of the printed page, face-to-face talks, and demonstration or object lesson, designed to reach every farmer and his family, at or near their homes, with knowledge and stimulus in every department of country life.

Organization.—There must be a vast enlargement of voluntary organization of farm men themselves. It is indispensable that farmers shall work together for their common interests and for the national welfare. If they do not do this, no governmental activity, no legislation, not even better schools, will greatly avail. The farmers are nevertheless relatively unorganized. We have only begun to develop business co-operation in America. Farmers do not influence legislation as they should. They need a more fully organized social and recreative life.

Spiritual Forces.—The forces and institutions that make for morality and spiritual ideals among rural people must be energized. We miss the heart of the problem if we neglect to foster personal character and neighborhood righteousness. The best way to preserve ideals for private conduct and public life is to build up the institutions of religion. The church has great power of leadership. The whole people should understand that it is vitally important to stand behind the rural church and to help it to become a great power in developing concrete country life ideals. It is especially important that the country church recognize that it has a social responsibility to the entire community as well as a religious responsibility to its own group of people.

Recommendations of the Commission. The commission recommends all the correctives that have been mentioned under the head of "The nature of the remedies." It does not wish to discriminate between important measures of relief for existing conditions. It has purposely avoided endorsing any particular bill now before congress, no matter what its value or object.

There are, however, in the opinion of the commission, two or three great movements of the utmost consequence that should be set under way at the earliest possible time, because they are fundamental to the whole problem of ultimate permanent reconstruction; these call for special explanation.

Taking Stock of Country Life.—There should be organized, as explained in the main report, under government leadership, a comprehensive plan for an exhaustive study or survey of all the conditions that surround the business of farming and the people who live in the country. In order to take stock of our resources and to supply the farmer with local knowledge, Federal and state governments, agricultural colleges, and other educational agencies, organizations of various types, and individual students of the problem, should be brought into co-operation for this great work of investigating with minute care all agricultural and country life conditions.

Nationalized Extension Work.—Each state college of agriculture should be empowered to organize as soon as practicable a complete department of college extension, so managed as to reach every person on the land in its state, with both information and inspiration. The work should include such forms of extension teaching as lectures, bulletins, reading courses, correspondence courses, demonstration, and other means of reaching the people at home and on their farms. It should be designed to forward not only the business of agriculture, but sanitation, education, home making, and all interests of country life.

Call for Leadership.

We must picture to ourselves a new rural social structure, developed from the strong resident forces of the open country; and then we must set at work all the agencies that will tend to bring this about. The entire people need to be roused to this avenue of usefulness. A new race of teachers is to appear in the country. A new rural clergy is to be trained. These leaders will see the great underlying problem of country life, and together they will work, each in his own field, for the one goal of a new and permanent rural civilization. On the development of this distinctively rural civilization rests ultimately our ability, by methods of farming requiring the highest intelligence, to continue to feed and clothe the hungry nations; to supply the city and metropolis with fresh blood, clean bodies, and clear brains that can endure the strain of modern urban life; and to preserve a race of men in the open country that, in the future as in the past, will be the stay and strength of the nation in the time of war, and its guiding and controlling spirit in time of peace.

It is to be hoped that many young men and women, fresh from our schools and institutions of learning, and quick with ambition and trained intelligence, will feel a new and strong call to service.

TIED CHILD KILLS HERSELF

Father Sees Girl of Eight End Her Life.

"GOOD-BY PAPA," SHE SAYS

Tiring of Family Cares May Have Used Pistol When Baby Brothers, for Whom She Was "Little Mother," Grew Ill.

Greensburg, Pa., Feb. 9.—Little May Estilla Flais, eight years old, killed herself with a revolver in the presence of her father. "Good-by, papa; I'm going to shoot," she cried as she pressed the trigger of the family revolver and sent a bullet into her brain.

This most sensational suicide occurred a few miles back of Hollivur Saturday evening, but word did not come to the corner of West Moreland county until yesterday.

Worried Over Family Cares.

That the little child, worried with the cares of being mother to the whole family, deliberately planned her own death is borne out by the almost frantic father and neighbors, to whom the wee girl had talked tearfully of her troubles as a housekeeper.

This is a poor miner whose wife died some weeks ago, leaving him with three small children. May, the girl of eight, being the eldest. Flais had not the money to get a housekeeper decided to allow May to act as woman of the house, to take care of the two smaller children in his absence, and to cook his meals too. This little one did for some days without complaint, but recently she had complained to the neighbors that the smaller children worried her and that everything seemed to go wrong with her in the house.

Father's Supper Late. Both her baby brothers had been ill Saturday and she had not been able to prepare the meal for her father against the time of his coming home from the mine. He went into the kitchen and began washing grime off his face when without warning his child-mother of the family appeared in the doorway with a big revolver which she had to handle with both hands and saluted him with: "Good-by, papa; I'm going to shoot!"

BINNS DODGES CAMERA MEN.

Hero of the Republic Shies at Having Pictures Taken.

London, Feb. 9.—"Jack" Binns, the wireless telegraph operator, who was on board the steamship Republic, landed at Liverpool yesterday.

Catching sight of the battery of cameras waiting to take his picture, he broke away at a run and hid in the corner of a dark shed, where he remained until his train for London started.

Binns goes to Peterborough, his native city, where an official welcome from the mayor and the city council awaits him. Binns will be borne in triumph through the decorated streets to the town hall, where an illuminated address will be presented to him. He possibly will be made a free man of the city.

Hepburn Loses Another Point.

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 9.—Representative Hepburn lost his recount in Hepburn county yesterday when the scheduled hearing at Creston went by default. None of Col. Hepburn's attorneys put in an appearance and after waiting all day Mr. Jamieson's attorneys returned to their homes. Prominent Republicans assert that a recount would not be favorable to Hepburn. This ends the contest in Union county and probably in the entire Eighth district.

No Jury in Carmack Case.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 9.—The nineteenth day closed with the jury still incomplete in the case of the slain against Col. Duncan B. Cooper, Robin J. Cooper and John D. Sharp, charged with the murder of former Senator E. W. Carmack. One juror, the eleventh, in the person of W. A. Adcock, a young farmer, was sent into the box.

Protest Against "Salome."

Philadelphia, Feb. 9.—The forthcoming production of "Salome" at Oscar Hammerstein's Philadelphia opera house, with Miss Mary Garden in the title role, has aroused the opposition of the clergy of Philadelphia, several of the ministerial bodies adopting resolutions of protest yesterday at their weekly meetings.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Janesville Daily Gazette, February 9, 1869.—A New Feature in a Social Gathering.—There was a large and pleasant social gathering at the residence of Alex. Graham, last evening, one peculiar feature of which was, that the guests were all masked. Many of the characters were exceedingly well-taken and carried out. Some of the more prominent among the ladies were: Mrs. Wm. Tallman, Mrs. Wm. Rogers, Mrs. Charles E. Mosely and Miss Beatty, Sisters of Charity; Mrs. Poots, an old lady; Miss Ella Shear, morning; Mrs. Davies, night; Mrs. Henry McKinney, evening star; Mrs. Dimock, morning; Miss Harris, pen and girl; Miss Maria Graham, flower girl; Mrs. Roundnight, Snowflake; Mrs. Dr. Whiting, Duchess of York; Mrs. Wm. There were some rich and well-chosen costumes among the gentlemen, which we have not space to enumerate. It was a unique and enjoyable entertainment.

A Fire Alarm.—There was a general alarm of fire about 5 o'clock this morning, caused by the discovery that the loft of C. T. Wilson's barn, by the Court street bridge, was in flames. Prompt action quelled an incipient conflagration. No question can exist to the fact that this was the work of an incendiary.

We exaggerate misfortune and happiness alike. We are never other so wretched or so happy as we say we are.—Hobbes

If a merchant has something worth advertising, make up your mind he will advertise it.

The men who went out to milk and sat down in the middle of the field and waited for the cow to back up, was a brother to the man who kept a store and wouldn't advertise because he reasoned that the purchasing public would back up to his place of business, when they wanted something.

It's a good plan to read the ads. every day and keep informed upon the STORE NEWS.

Many people speak about these ads. and take a keen interest in the antics and doings of these funny little tad fellows, as they appear from week to week. Do you take notice of the special values that are advertised and specialised from time to time? You ought to, for every item is always a bargain and a money saver, and inserted with the one idea of bringing you to our store. Filling up newspaper space with a lot of self laudatory remarks has never been this store's advertising policy.

THE ETERNAL FEMINE

Under conditions once very generally obtaining it was considered rude to contradict a lady, and in spite of the movement for sex equality some of us find it hard to live down our old-fashioned prejudices.

Fortunately for the drygoods houses nothing of the kind is in the least likely to happen. There may be two opinions as to whether some ladies would be greatly concerned about bringing about a financial crisis in order to secure something they thought they wanted.

When the drygoods houses would suffer, and no doubt many manufacturers would be affected, but there could all be helped over, especially as industry elsewhere would be stimulated.

When the tour was completed the money alone totaled nearly $3,000. The clothing filled the express wagons many times over. A trembling old man brought a pair of trousers (thrice patched. Men and women wept as they gave, literally tearing clothes from their bodies.

Nor was the giving confined to the Italians. A Chinaman came out of his laundry with a half dollar and said, "No help too."

Attitude in Face of Death. would not be time wasted if these gigantic figures could be placed on record so that the people of the state could really learn what reform has cost.

If the men most interested in the welfare of Janesville would take the trouble to elect good substantial businessmen as members of the common council they would be doing more good than they are by talking of a citizens' league.

What started as a democratic movement to make political capital has ended up in a good, first-class republican row and the old scores which had all healed over since the factional fight have broken open again and it will take more than the election of Stephenson to heal them.

Lincoln is the type of politician that Illinois offers to the world as an example of the difference between the past and the present-day officeholder.

One reason that our American fleet was as peaceful was because it did not find anything of its size on its trip around the world.

Congress can even think of a slim excuse for wanting to run the census bureau on a spoils system basis.

Probably South Africa and Iceland feel slighted because the American fleet did not touch at ports in either place.

American now possesses the biggest war vessel afloat, but there is no haste to try it out on anybody.

Heart to Heart Talks.

OUT OF THEIR POVERTY.

The devastation and death, the hideous ruins, the awful day of doom that came to Sicily and southern Italy, are not without their uses. The law of compensation holds even here.

The aid and affliction has served to open the hearts of men and women to give of their substance.

The gift of congress was large. Private philanthropy has done much. But those who have given out of their poverty have given most.

One of the most remarkable of all the donations of the poor occurred the other day in New York city when a procession of wagons, headed by a band, went through the Italian quarters of the east side.

Ten express wagons started on the route at 9 o'clock, and an hour later it was necessary to send the wagons back for unloading.

With the first strains of the band playing the Italian national airs tenement windows bristled with people. A few moments later down from the windows fluttered shawls, skirts, trousers, vests, coats, underwear and handkerchiefs.

In the shower also came money—a surprising lot of money considering how little the givers had. Pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, half dollars, hurriedly wrapped in paper, struck the pavement, with now and then a bill.

When the tour was completed the money alone totaled nearly $3,000.

The clothing filled the express wagons many times over. A trembling old man brought a pair of trousers (thrice patched. Men and women wept as they gave, literally tearing clothes from their bodies.

Nor was the giving confined to the Italians. A Chinaman came out of his laundry with a half dollar and said, "No help too."

An aged Jewess took a shawl from her shoulders—probably her dearest possession—and gave it, with tears in her eyes.

As the newspaper reporters watched the spectacle and witnessed the eager desire and abandon of these poor people to help the suffering they realized that touch of nature that makes the whole world kin.

Remember the story of the "widow's mite?"

So of these very poor. Congress gave largely. Philanthropists gave generously. But of their poverty the poor gave more than all besides.

Pittsburg—Delving down into the ancient history of the Pittsburg baseball club, it is found that Hank O'Day once considered the king of umpires, and Connie Mack, present manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, were at one time wearers of the Pirate uniform. They didn't look then as they do now. Those two famous figures in the baseball world were not wearers of Pittsburg togs at the same time, Finished the season. He found here a galaxy of pitchers, consisting of Galvin, Morris, Mountain and Meehan. The latter was quite a favorite and it is a pity that no portrait of Peter exists. The catching staff of the Pittsburg team in O'Day's days was made up of Miller, Carroll, Kemmer and Kling.

Connie Mack came here in 1891 from the Buffalo Players' league team. He began his real baseball career with the Hartford in 1885 and 1886. After the season of 1886 the Washington team of the National league secured the "Hartford big four," of which Connie was one, and the only one to make good in fast company. Connie played with Washington in 1887, 1888 and 1889. Then he jumped the Senators and went to the Buffalo Brotherhood team. When peace was declared, Mack came to Pittsburg, where he soon became one of the most popular players. He was regarded as the star catcher of the Pirates (and by the way, the Pittsburg team got the name of "Pirates" the very year Mack came here). The other catchers were George Miller, Tim Berger and Jackie Folds. Fred Carroll was a member of the team, but he divided honors with Dan Lally in right field.

The great rose family has been increased by 450 members in the space of three years. DISMISSED ACTION AGAINST ANDREW

Judge Field Found No Evidence to Hold Magellan Man on Charge of Leaving the Hunting License.

On motion of the defendant's attorney, T. S. Nolan, Judge Field this morning dismissed the case of the State vs. B. T. Andrew of the town of Magnolia. Much of the evidence introduced by the prosecution turned out to be largely in his favor, and nothing substantial was offered to sustain the charge preferred by Deputy Game Warden Draht that Andrew had knowingly permitted a non-lawyer, Walter Collins, to attempt to defraud the state by carrying his (Andrew's) hunting license while on a little gunning expedition in search of rabbits. As a matter of fact, Collins shot and killed a quail and for this offense he paid a fine of $10 and costs amounting to $6.30 on December 16. The latter declared at the time that he had been visiting over Sunday at the home of his father-in-law who had been confined to his bed with illness for many weeks; that everybody also seemed to be planning for a little Sunday afternoon rabbit-shooting; that he asked Mr. Andrew where his hunting license was; and that the latter told him where he could find it, at the same time transferring or selling, even if it were—Collins holding a non-resident of the state; and that he must not under and punishment try to use it. Mr. Collins put the license back on a bureau but subsequently, when his father-in-law was not observing him, put it in his pocket. This representation of the circumstances was corroborated by a daughter, a daughter-in-law, and other witnesses this morning. Mr. Collins is in the counting department of the C. & N. W. Ry. Co. at Chicago.

FARMERS URGED TO CO-OPERATE

IN A SPECIAL MESSAGE SENT TO CONGRESS. BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Views of the Nation's Chief on Advancement of Country Social Life of Special Interest to Farmers.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—A special message from President Roosevelt was sent to Congress today along with the report of the Country-Life Commission. The President makes the following suggestions, recommendations, and comments:

"To the Senate and House of Representatives: I transmit herewith the report of the commission on country life. At the outset I desire to point out that not a dollar of the public money has been paid to any commissioner for his work on the commission.

The report shows the general condition of farming life in the open country, and points out its larger problems; it indicates ways in which the government, national and state, may show the people how to solve some of these problems; and it suggests a continuance of the work which the commission began.

Judging by 30 public hearings, to which farmers and farmers' wives from 40 states and territories came, and from 120,000 answers to printed questions sent out by the department of agriculture, the commission finds that the general level of country life is high compared with any preceding time or with any other land. If it has in recent years slipped down in some places, it has risen in more places. Its progress has been general, if not uniform.

Yet farming does not yield either the profit or the satisfaction that it ought to yield, and may be made to yield. There is discontent in the country, and in places discouragement. Farmers as a class do not magnify their calling, and the movement to the towns, though, I am happy to say, less than formerly, is still strong.

Under our system, it is helpful to promote discussion of ways in which the people can help themselves. There are three main directions in which the farmers can help themselves; namely, better farming, better business, and better living on the farm. The national department of agriculture, which has rendered service equaled by no other similar department in any other time or place; the state departments of agriculture; the state colleges of agriculture and the mechanical arts, especially through their extension work; the state agricultural experiment stations; the Farmers' union; the Grange; the agricultural press; and other similar agencies; have all combined to place within the reach of the American farmer an amount and quality of agricultural information, which, if applied, would enable him, over large areas, to double the production of the farm.

For Better Business and Living. The object of the commission on country life, therefore, is not to help the farmer raise better crops, but to call his attention to the opportunities for better business and better living on the farm. If country life is to become what it should be, and what I believe it ultimately will be—one of the most dignified, desirable, and sought-after ways of earning a living—the farmer must take advantage not only of the agricultural knowledge which is at his disposal, but of the methods which have raised and continued to raise the standards of living and of intelligence in other callings.

Those engaged in all other industrial and commercial callings have found it necessary, under modern economic conditions, to organize themselves for mutual advantage and for the protection of their own particular interests in relation to other interests. The farmers of every progressive European country have realized this essential fact and have found in the co-operative system exactly the form of business combination they need.

Now, whatever the state may do toward improving the practice of agriculture, it is not within the sphere of any government to reorganize the farmers' business or reconstruct the social life of farming communities. It is, however, quite within its power to use its influence and the machinery of publicity which it can control for calling public attention to the needs of the facts. For example, it is the obvious duty of the government to call the attention of farmers to the growing monopolization of water power. The farmers, above all, should have that power, on reasonable terms, for cheap transportation, for lighting their homes, and for innumerable uses in the daily tasks of the farm.

It would be idle to assert that life on the farm occupies as good a position in dignity, desirability, and business results as the farmers might easily give it if they chose. One of the chief difficulties is the failure of country life, as it exists at present, to satisfy the higher social and intellectual aspirations of country people. Whether the best elements of the rural population into the towns is due chiefly to this cause or to the superior business opportunities of city life may be open to question. But no one at all familiar with farm life throughout the United States can fail to recognize the necessity for building up the life of the farm upon its social as well as upon its productive side.

Necessity for Co-operation. It is true that country life has improved greatly in attractiveness, health and comfort, and that the farmer's earnings are higher than they were. But city life is advancing even more rapidly, because of the greater attention which is being given by the citizens of the towns to their own betterment. For just this reason the introduction of effective agricultural co-operation throughout the United States is of the first importance. Where farmers are organized co-operatively they not only avail themselves much more readily of business opportunities and improved methods, but it is found that the organizations which bring them together in the work of their lives are also used for social and intellectual advancement.

The co-operative plan is the best plan of organization wherever men have the right spirit to carry it out. Under this plan any business undertaking is managed by a committee; every man has one vote, and only one vote; and every one gets profits according to what he sells or buys or supplies. It develops individual responsibility and has a moral as well as a financial value over any other plan.

I desire only to take counsel with the farmers as fellow-citizens. It is not the problem of the farmers alone that I am discussing with them, but a problem which affects every city as well as every farm in the country. It is a problem which the working farmers will have to solve for themselves; but it is a problem which also affects in only less degree all the rest of us, and therefore if we can render any help toward its solution, it is not only our duty but our interest to do so.

The foregoing will, I hope, make it clear why I appointed a commission to consider problems of farm life which have hitherto had far too little attention, and the neglect of which has not only held back life in the country, but also lowered the efficiency of the whole nation. The welfare of the farmer is of vital consequence to the welfare of the whole community. The strengthening of country life, therefore, is the strengthening of the whole nation.

Work to Help the Farmers. The commission has tried to help the farmers to see clearly their own problem and to see it as a whole; to distinguish clearly between what the government can do and what the farmers must do for themselves; and it wishes to bring not only the farmers, but the nation as a whole, to realize that the growing of crops, though an essential part, is only a part of country life. Crop growing is the essential foundation; but it is no less essential that the farmer shall get an adequate return for what he grows; and it is no less essential—indeed, it is literally vital—that he and his wife and his children shall lead the right kind of life.

For this reason, it is of the first importance that the United States department of agriculture, through which as prime agent the ideas the commission stands for must reach the people, should become without delay in fact a department of country life, fitted to deal not only with crops, but also with all the larger aspects of life in the open country.

From all that has been done and learned these great general and immediate needs of country life stand out: First, effective co-operation among farmers, to put them on a level with the organized interests with which they do business.

Second, a new kind of schools in the country, which shall teach the children as much outdoors as indoors and perhaps more, so that they will prepare for country life, and not as at present, mainly for life in town.

Third, better means of communication, including good roads and a parcels post, which the country people are everywhere, and rightly, unanimous in demanding.

To these may well be added better sanitation; for easily preventable diseases hold several million country people in the slavery of continuous ill health.

Duty of the Government. The commission points out, and I concur in the conclusion, that the most important help that the government, whether national or state, can give is to show the people how to go about these tasks of organization, education and communication with the best and quickest results. This can be done by the collection and spread of information. One community can thus be informed of what other communities have done, and one country of what other countries have done. Such help by the people's government would lead to a comprehensive plan of organization, education and communication, and make the farming country better to live in, for intellectual and social reasons as well as for purely agricultural reasons.

The government through the department of agriculture does not cultivate any man's farm for him. But it does put at his service useful knowledge that he would not otherwise get. In the same way the national and state governments might put into the people's hands the now and right knowledge of school work. The task of maintaining and developing the schools would remain, as now, with the people themselves.

The only recommendation I submit is that an appropriation of $25,000 be provided, to enable the commission to digest the material it has collected, and to collect and to digest much more that is within its reach, and thus complete its work. This would enable the commission to gather in the harvest of suggestion which is resulting from the discussion it has stirred up. The commissioners have served without compensation, and I do not recommend any appropriation for their services, but only for the expenses that will be required to finish the task they have begun.

To Develop Country Community. To improve our system of agriculture seems to me the most urgent of the tasks which lie before us. But it cannot, in my judgment, be effected by measures which touch only the material and technical side of the subject; the whole business and life of the farmer must also be taken into account. Such considerations led me to appoint the commission on country life. Our object should be to help develop in the country community the great ideals of the community life as well as of personal character. One of the most important adjuncts to this end must be the country church, and I invite your attention to what the commission says of the country church and of the need of an extension of such work as that of the Young Men's Christian association in country communities. Let me lay special emphasis upon what the commission says at the very end of its report on personal ideals and local leadership. Everything resolves itself in the end into the question of personality. Neither society nor government can do voluntary country life unless there is voluntary country life in the personal ideals of the men and women who live in the country. In the development of character, the home should be more important than the school, or than society at large. When, once the basic material needs have been met, high ideals may be quite independent of income; but they cannot be realized without sufficient income to provide adequate funds; and where the community at large is not financially prosperous it is impossible to develop a higher average personal and community ideal. In short, the fundamental facts of human nature apply to men and women who live in the country just as they apply to men and women who live in the towns. Given a sufficient foundation of the moral well being, the influence of the farmers and farmers' wives on their children becomes the factor of first importance in determining the attitude of the next generation toward farm life. The farmer should realize that the person who most needs consideration on the farm is his wife. I do not in the least mean that she should purchase as at the expense of duty. Neither man nor woman is really happy or really useful save on condition of doing his or her duty. If the woman shrinks her duty as housewife, as home keeper, as the mother whose prime function is to bear and rear a sufficient number of healthy children, then she is not entitled to our regard. But if she does her duty she is more entitled to our regard than the man who does his duty; and the man should show special consideration for her needs.

Welfare of Nation at Stake. I warn my countrymen that the great recent progress made in city life is not a full measure of our civilization; for our civilization rests on the wholesomeness, the attractiveness, and the completeness, as well as the prosperity, of life in the country. The men and women on the farms stand for what is fundamentally best and most needed in our American life. Upon the development of country life rests ultimately our ability, by methods of farming requiring the highest intelligence, to continue to feed and clothe the hungry nations; to supply the city with fresh blood, clean bodies, and clear brains that can endure the terrific strain of modern life; we need the development of men in the open country, who will be in the future, as in the past, the stay and strength of the nation in time of war, and its guiding and controlling spirit in time of peace.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, The White House, February 9, 1900. Poor Return for Hospitality. Two women had descended the steps of a house whose owner was giving an afternoon tea. Vehicles spun up to the curb or away from it, and through the ever opening door passengers could get a glimpse of moon-shaded lights and the huddle of mud. But the two women had walked, and at almost their first step away from the house of festivity the one, with the extra thin voice that foreigners like to judge us all by said: "Did you notice that lamp shade? Did you notice it? Where on earth do you suppose she raked up a thing like that? I never saw such a fool shade in all the days of my life."

"I was too taken up with the waist she had on to have eyes for anything else. Or all the silly shade I ever saw, that waist was the limit. You could see it was made over and botched at that, and as for the skirt—"

And by that time the pair, who had accepted the hospitality of a woman unwise enough to admit them to her home, had passed beyond the hearing of the person behind.

Chinamen Stick to Quinine. Most Chinamen are slow about forsaking Oriental drugs and quackery. Many of them live here for years before they can be tempted to sample Occidental medicines, and some of them live and die without making the experiment. In fact, when a Chinaman turns cosmopolitan taking American medicine is his final accomplishment. But when he does get the medicine habit quinine is his long suit. Whether or not it is good for what ails him, every Chinaman who has learned to patronize American drug stores feeds his system with quinine pills.—New York Pharmaceutical Era.

Registering Device Prevents Hen From Cheating Her Employers.

The dishonest hen, with cannibalistic tendencies, can no longer defraud her employer with impunity, and if she likes eggs for her meals she is in danger of decapitation. Two Wisconsin men have put their heads together and have perfected a registering device which keeps a record of every egg laid and enables sudden visitors to detect any loss through theft or any other agency. This device is in the form of a band that fits over the hen's body. The expansion of the egg causes the band to spread and register a number. If the indicator shows that a hen is laying more eggs than are collected and if the owner finds no evidence of theft, he can then be sure that the bird is eating the eggs herself and either put her in the stewpan and replace her with a more honest fowl or keep such a close watch over her that she will not have an opportunity to indulge her cannibalistic taste. It is impossible to cure a hen of this habit once it is contracted.

MODERN WAY OF LIVING

Has a Tendency to Weaken the Strongest.

One hundred years ago there was less kidney trouble than there is today.

The worry, hurry, and overwork of modern living doles the work of the kidneys, wears and weakens the muscles to properly do their duty of filtering the poisons from the blood. As a result the whole system runs down.

Feel the slightest symptom of kidney trouble—the first backache, the first irregularity of the urine. It may be the forerunner of dangerous disease. You can cure yourself quickly with Doan's Kidney Pills.

Read the experience of a Janesville citizen.

Chas. W. Allen, living in Janesville, Wis., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills and they are all right. I can endorse them as a good kidney and backache remedy and one that can be relied upon. I suffered from these troubles for a long time, and although I used different preparations I received no relief. Finally I procured Doan's Kidney Pills from the People's Drug Co. and began their use. In a few days the trouble left me and has never returned. I can certainly recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to others."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMurray Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

A paper published in Sorocco, New Mexico, in speaking of the State School of Mines, situated at that place, has the following to say of one of Clinton's young men who has the chair of chemistry in that school: "Doctor Kommerer is offering a course in 'Elements of Photography.' The course is designed to furnish the engineer with a working knowledge of photography such as will enable him to use the camera intelligently as an aid in his engineering work. The classroom work will consist of one lecture a week. This will be supplemented by laboratory work in which each student will be required to take and finish a good negative, volor print, platinum print, lantern slide, and bromide enlargement." This is a new course for the school, originated by Prof. Kommerer, who is also an expert with the camera. The state of Wisconsin has purchased a large number of his pictures of nature subjects, especially of bird life, and he is most adequately fitted to teach this art to the engineering students. George, as he is familiarly called here, by a host of friends, is a young man whom Clinton is proud to call her own.

Friday evening a Union Memorial Lincoln service will be held in the Baptist church. Rev. W. P. Look of Waukesha will deliver the address of the evening. All will be glad to again hear Mr. Look speak, for he has a large circle of staunch admirers here where he used to minister to us from the M. E. church.

ONE OF THE PROPHETS.

At the village postoffice I was introduced to a man named Saunders, but we were in a hurry just then I did little more than pass the time of day. Two hours later he came down to the inn and picked up for me, and when I came down he stepped forward and said: "My name's Saunders."

"Well, Mr. Saunders, have you any business with me?" "I was introduced to you, you know."

"I don't think you know just who I am."

"No? You live here in the village, I take it?"

"Yes, but who am I?"

"I understand that your name was Saunders."

"And so it is, but what Saunders, sir—what Saunders?"

"I really can't say."

"No, sir, you can't, but I can. I am the Saunders, sir, and the only Ma-

Don't Be Frightened

But use a little Common Sense

A Doctor recently announced the belief, and issued a certificate to the effect, that a death was due to cancer caused largely by the excessive use of coffee.

The cause of cancer is not definitely settled in the medical profession, albeit the disease is on the increase.

Without attempting to decide a question so peculiarly within the special domain of medical science, it is suggested that the

to be free from that and other diseases is to avoid coffee and drink

It belongs to health for a baby to eat and sleep, to laugh and grow fat.
